

Pet
Therapy

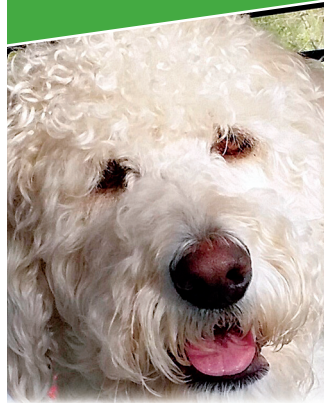

Rosebud

Pet
Therapy

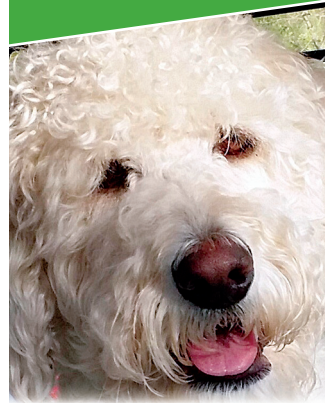

Rosebud

Pet
Therapy

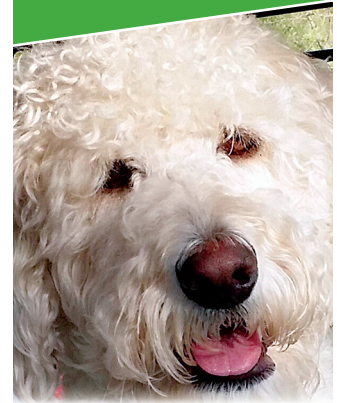

Rosebud

Pet
Therapy

Rosebud

Pet
Therapy

Rosebud

MAURY REGIONAL MEDICAL CENTER

MAURY REGIONAL
MEDICAL CENTER

MAURY REGIONAL
MEDICAL CENTER

MAURY REGIONAL
MEDICAL CENTER

MAURY REGIONAL
MEDICAL CENTER

Pet therapy is a program developed by the Maury Regional Medical Center Volunteer Services Department to brighten the stay of patients in our care.

Studies have shown that physical contact with a pet can lower anxiety, reduce high blood pressure and, in some cases, cause the release of endorphins, chemicals in the body that help to suppress the pain response.

For more information about the program, becoming a volunteer or arranging a pet visit, please contact Volunteer Services at 931.380.4047.

Rosebud is a second generation Labradoodle trained in emotional support therapy. Rosebud joins her human companion, C.J. Percle, in making visits to brighten the day of patients and staff members. Her unlimited puppy kisses make her a favorite of everyone she meets. Rosebud enjoys entertaining visitors to her 201-acre orchard and chasing deer, turkeys and rabbits. After a long day, Rosebud enjoys her favorite treat of bacon.

Pet therapy is a program developed by the Maury Regional Medical Center Volunteer Services Department to brighten the stay of patients in our care.

Studies have shown that physical contact with a pet can lower anxiety, reduce high blood pressure and, in some cases, cause the release of endorphins, chemicals in the body that help to suppress the pain response.

For more information about the program, becoming a volunteer or arranging a pet visit, please contact Volunteer Services at 931.380.4047.

Rosebud is a second generation Labradoodle trained in emotional support therapy. Rosebud joins her human companion, C.J. Percle, in making visits to brighten the day of patients and staff members. Her unlimited puppy kisses make her a favorite of everyone she meets. Rosebud enjoys entertaining visitors to her 201-acre orchard and chasing deer, turkeys and rabbits. After a long day, Rosebud enjoys her favorite treat of bacon.

Pet therapy is a program developed by the Maury Regional Medical Center Volunteer Services Department to brighten the stay of patients in our care.

Studies have shown that physical contact with a pet can lower anxiety, reduce high blood pressure and, in some cases, cause the release of endorphins, chemicals in the body that help to suppress the pain response.

For more information about the program, becoming a volunteer or arranging a pet visit, please contact Volunteer Services at 931.380.4047.

Rosebud is a second generation Labradoodle trained in emotional support therapy. Rosebud joins her human companion, C.J. Percle, in making visits to brighten the day of patients and staff members. Her unlimited puppy kisses make her a favorite of everyone she meets. Rosebud enjoys entertaining visitors to her 201-acre orchard and chasing deer, turkeys and rabbits. After a long day, Rosebud enjoys her favorite treat of bacon.

Pet therapy is a program developed by the Maury Regional Medical Center Volunteer Services Department to brighten the stay of patients in our care.

Studies have shown that physical contact with a pet can lower anxiety, reduce high blood pressure and, in some cases, cause the release of endorphins, chemicals in the body that help to suppress the pain response.

For more information about the program, becoming a volunteer or arranging a pet visit, please contact Volunteer Services at 931.380.4047.

Rosebud is a second generation Labradoodle trained in emotional support therapy. Rosebud joins her human companion, C.J. Percle, in making visits to brighten the day of patients and staff members. Her unlimited puppy kisses make her a favorite of everyone she meets. Rosebud enjoys entertaining visitors to her 201-acre orchard and chasing deer, turkeys and rabbits. After a long day, Rosebud enjoys her favorite treat of bacon.

Pet therapy is a program developed by the Maury Regional Medical Center Volunteer Services Department to brighten the stay of patients in our care.

Studies have shown that physical contact with a pet can lower anxiety, reduce high blood pressure and, in some cases, cause the release of endorphins, chemicals in the body that help to suppress the pain response.

For more information about the program, becoming a volunteer or arranging a pet visit, please contact Volunteer Services at 931.380.4047.

Rosebud is a second generation Labradoodle trained in emotional support therapy. Rosebud joins her human companion, C.J. Percle, in making visits to brighten the day of patients and staff members. Her unlimited puppy kisses make her a favorite of everyone she meets. Rosebud enjoys entertaining visitors to her 201-acre orchard and chasing deer, turkeys and rabbits. After a long day, Rosebud enjoys her favorite treat of bacon.